LE LION ANGLAIS ET LE TAUREAU BOER

Illustrations from Le Petit Journal that relate to the Anglo Boer War

Le Petit Journal was a daily Parisian newspaper in existence from 1863 to 1944. From 1884 it included a weekly illustrated supplement. This document contains all of the prints and etchings from the supplements dated between 1899 and 1902 which related to the Anglo Boer War. These illustrations portray many exciting war scenes, dramatic social happenings, gun battles, and human drama. The strong sympathy that the French had for the Boers (or dislike for the English) during the Anglo Boer War can clearly be seen from the prints and etchings in the Le Petit Journal supplements.

As the circulation figures of the newspapers grew, production costs started to fall because of the growth of advertising and technological improvements. Le Petit Journal was the first to aim for a mass audience, cramming their pages with crime stories, serialized novels, and human interest stories. The newspaper was extremely popular and at the height of its popularity it had a circulation of over a million copies. The back and front covers were printed in bold and eye-catching color, usually with prints or etchings of news-worthy events. The price was very cheap and the print-run ran into more than a million copies for every issue. The inside pages consisted of text and at times pages of photographs or large-sized war maps. Throughout the Anglo Boer War years many covers were dedicated to matters pertaining to the war. The emphasis was on sensation. Some cover pages were devoted to depicting various well-known and lesser-known commanding officers and heroes of the war. There were many covers which related to President Paul Kruger as he had a very strong following in France. Fortune Louis Meaulle (1844-1901) and Tofani Oswaldo (1849-1915) were the main artists of the prints and etchings relating to the Anglo Boer War. Copies of these illustrations are still very collectable and are for sale at many book stores and flea markets in France.

Neil McDonald put this document together by downloading the relevant Le Petit Journal illustrations from the digital National Library of France. In order to get to the supplements, google "Le Petit Journal" and then follow the "Le Petit Journal illustre from 1884 to 1920" link in the Wikipedia encyclopedia.
